Agri-Environmental economics and sustainable growth: EU practice

The course will provide students with a sound knowledge and understanding of the major basic results of environmental and agriculture economics. Analytical tools, particularly benefit-cost analysis, will be explained and applied to problems with Agri-environmental dimensions. Criteria and strategies used in the development and implementation of agri-environmental policies will be defined and summarized. The EU Environmental Implementation Review practices will be used as well to understand the turning the EU into a circular, resource-efficient, green and competitive low carbon economy. This teaching activity provides a background of current policies and practices regarding agri-environmental issues and present the EU best practices.

Nature protection and environmental impact assessment in EU

The course aims to provide a working knowledge of current environmental, social and economic impacts and methods related to Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA), and consider in details how these impacts can be quantified and analysed. The course also gives an overview of the legislative framework of EIA and explains the EIA process, providing examples of techniques used in impact assessment relating to topics including soils, ecology and landscape. EIA can be described as a decision-making tool, a legislative instrument and a formalised environmental management process. It exists to enable precautionary measures to be incorporated into project and policy planning for the protection of environmental and human systems. EIA allows determination of the potential impacts of development on environmental quality, social well-being and regional economies. Environmental assessment can be undertaken for separate projects, on the basis of Directive 2011/92/EU (known as 'Environmental Impact Assessment' – EIA Directive) or for public plans or programmes on the basis of Directive 2001/42/EC (known as 'Strategic Environmental Assessment' – SEA Directive).
